change. And I'm sure most of us feel that way, and hopefully it isn't necessary. But here is what I'm trying to understand, and that is this. If we hire someone who doesn't exist now as a position, and that being the position of Capitol administrator,...and I assume they would have to have a little support. I don't know what staff they would need. Senator Beutler, you could comment on that, maybe, if you have another time of talking. But I don't know if they're expected to use the staff that would be available now through DAS, staff support, but the $60,000 plus benefits, or whatever it takes to hire that person, has to come from somewhere. Now, I would assume that either DAS lets someone go, if they have...unless they have someone that's qualified to do that, and they can shift them over. But if they don't, then they must let someone go. Or, as I think the point being made by Senator Wehrbein is, maintenance costs or something are going to have to have that carved out of them in order to facilitate that salaried position, because there is no salaried position like that that I am aware of. So that is simply my question, my...I don't want to raise it to the level of dilemma, because I don't know that it is. But I think it's a legitimate question. And if the bill passes and this A bill passes, this summer I anticipate there will be meetings and decisions to be made. And the Speaker will have to be involved in some of that. And I'm looking for...I'm looking for your guidance and ideas about how this transition should occur, and how fiscally this can be done. And I will give the rest of my time to comment on that to Senator Beutler, if he would like, Mr. President.

SENATOR CUDABACK: Senator Beutler.

SENATOR BEUTLER: Senator Cudaback, Senator Bromm. I don't think there's any doubt but that you're right, we need to deal with the $60,000 administrator's salary. And you have a 3.3 or so million dollar budget. By the way, I didn't know about this amendment, or I would have come prepared at a greater level of detail. We're getting to a level of detail here on fiscal bills that I've rarely seen. Usually the fiscal note prepared by the Fiscal Office is accepted, if that's what is put forward with the bill and it's reasonable in nature. In any event, if you take the administrator's salary, you need to reallocate
